Paying tithing pays, LDS leaders say

By TODD F. MAYNES

Staff Writer
A LDS Church general authority students to pay their tithing offering and to remember sacrifice brings forth the blessing on Saturday night at stake general conference sesming up the evening's es in the Marriott Center, Tom Perry, a member of the Twelve, said students should be honest with themselves, with neighbors and with the Lord if they find happiness.

He was dismayed to find out that students may not be as honest as they were, " Elder Perry said. "I've seen that many of us had bad checks and don't pay him. Could it be that you're completely honest?"

At all your dealings and make an 100 percent honest," Perry added. "Honesty is a virtue — the precepts of our require complete honesty."

As of the evening's speakers, Perry praised the six men who'd him, saying the only reason was to bear testimony of the speakers' words and to keep his grip.

"We'll all be told by six remainers to pay tithing and be obedient," he said. "My words are only

I'm blessed because I hadn't originally planned to speak tonight. I'm here so my wife will maintain her pleasing personality."

Other speakers at the conference were members of the First Quorum of the Seventy: Elders Theodore M. Burton, Marion D. Hanks, Loren C. Dunn, Robert L. Simpson, Gene R. Cook and Richard G. Scott.

"Perhaps the only thing you have to share is a smile, but you ought to share even that."

— Elder Marion D. Hanks

Exhorting students to pay their tithing, Elder Burton recounted how he suffered from bronchitis as a college student and got into trouble when he failed to pay his tithing.

"One semester my books were incredibly expensive and so I decided to not pay my tithing," he said. "Soon thereafter, I broke a flask in a chemistry laboratory, causing a fire and an explosion. I could have bawled, I was so quickly decided I'd better pay my tithing," he said. "My wife soon thereafter got a job at the student union, started tutoring organic chemistry, and everything improved."

"Why it improved I don't know. You students ought to be smart enough to figure it out."

Elder Burton joked often with students, paraphrasing in modern-day slang the scriptural words of Adam when an angel asked Adam why he offered sacrifices to the Lord.

"When the Lord says jump I don't ask why," Elder Burton said, quoting Adam. "My only question is how high."

Elder Burton told students that tithing was the Lord's way of doing business — and people should always do things the way the Lord wants.

Elder Hanks told students the key to temporal happiness is hard work, paying tithing and going the extra mile.

"St. Thomas Aquinas taught long ago that laziness is sadness of the soul," Elder Hanks said. "What we do with our time may not be consequential, but what is important is gaining a sense of delight in our work."

Elder Hanks said doing good work will bring out the best in people, and will create a feeling of pride and self-worth.

"Good work will produce within us a sense of true accomplishment. Work for everything you have and work at something that builds your talents. You may only dig ditches or push elevator buttons, but work to do it the best you can," he said.

"Don't miss the joy that comes when you give everything that is expected of you and then a little more."

Elder Marion D. Hanks, a member of the LDS Quorum of the Seventy, addresses those in attendance of the 14-stake general conference Saturday night. Elder Hanks and other LDS leaders talked of the blessings from the paying of fast offerings. Said Elder Loren C. Dunn of fast offerings, "The money goes to people who need it. That is the great principle of fast offerings."

urses say anti-abortion views Dr. Jantz to speak at forum on Goethe increase promotion chances

By DENNY ROY
Senior Reporter

As many as 50,000 nurses in the States, most ignorant of the termination statutes that protect them, may find their professional identities affected by conscientious objection to participation in abortion operations, said a BYU research team.

Dr. Cole Durham and Dr. Mary Wood, professors of law, and Dr. J. Condie, a professor of psychology, conducted a national survey of 705 randomly-selected nurses in 1979, attempting to ascertain the percentage of nurses who abort the and the difficult nurses face.

Most hospitals accommodate the majority of nurses who have a firmly-grounded opposition to abortion, the researchers wrote in a of their findings. 5 percent respondents indicated that for promotions and assignments are influenced by their attitudes toward abortion.

"We respect the values of our employees," said Mark Wells, assistant administrator for Valley West Hospital in West Valley City, Utah. "I personally would feel greater respect for a nurse who didn't want to participate in an abortion."

Hospital administrators contacted by BYU researchers generally denied that the position of anti-abortion nurses creates undue dissonance.

"We respect the values of our employees," said Mark Wells, assistant administrator for Valley West Hospital in West Valley City, Utah. "I personally would feel greater respect for a nurse who didn't want to participate in an abortion."

Nurses cannot be forced by administrators to perform abortions against their wills, said Jim Perdue, an administrative analyst for UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles, Calif.

"If I had any awareness that a nurse had any objections to working on abortions, I wouldn't put her in that situation. It would be ridiculous. It would be a compromising situation for both the nurse and the patient."

Employment conditions for nurses are so favorable at present that no nurse could be forced into an undesirable work situation, Perdue added.

"A nurse can choose herself in a compromising situation, there are many options. A half-way decent nurse can get a job anywhere, any day of the week."

It was for the benefit of nurses who seek to avoid such compromising situations without fear of discrimination that 44 states have passed "conscience clause" protection laws, wrote the trio.

Despite this legislative sensitivity to the nurses' problem, the researchers wrote most of their respondents were ignorant of the legal options available to them.

Almost every person who reads works by the great German literary figure Goethe embarks on a voyage of discovery.

Speaking on "Discovering Goethe" at Tuesday's BYU Forum will be Dr. Harold Jantz, one of America's leading educators on Goethe and German-American literary topics. The public is invited to attend the 10 a.m. assembly at the Marriott Center.

The talk will be broadcast live on KBYU-TV and repeated Nov. 14 at 9 p.m. It will also be televised live on KBYU-TV, Channel 11, and repeated

Tuesday at 9 p.m. and Nov. 14 at 6 p.m.

Jantz will demonstrate specific instances in which people make discoveries that are both new and valid according to a Goethean masterpiece.

He said sometimes it is the creative artist who sees and understands aspects of Goethe that had previously been unseen and misunderstood by the critics and scholars. Likewise, Goethe, the creative artist, reveals previously unseen or missing profound aspects of various great artists before him.

Ruff reviews PAC policies; suggests investment ideas

By BRANDON FORD
Assistant Monday Editor

"When I read the ad I knew there was only one sure loser in the campaign, and that was me," Howard Ruff said in a recent telephone interview with The Daily Universe.

"If Ray won it would be in spite of the Ruff PAC, and if Nielsen won it would probably my fault."

Ruff was referring to the advertisement that his political lobbying group, Ruff PAC, placed in the fall of Ray Beckham, a candidate in the recent primaries for Utah's third congressional seat.

Many people, Ruff included, feel the Ruff PAC ad contributed to Beckham's defeat.

Ruff admitted he had been shown the ad the night before it ran, but, having just returned from a two-week cruise, he was tired and put it aside without reading it.

"I didn't read the ad until it ran the next day," he said. "While the information in the ad was correct, the timing was terrible and it probably helped Nielsen win it," he said.

Ruff said he considered refuting what the ad said, but Nielsen attacked the ad and Ruff thought it would be best to stick it out and not say anything.

"I've never been so sick at heart in all my life," he said.

When asked if Ruff will ever run an ad without his prior review again, he said: "I may make mistakes — but I never make the same mistake twice. From now on all ads have to be approved by me before they run."

Ruff spent four years with the publication of his book, How to Prosper During the Coming Bad Years. Since then he has written Survive and Win in the Inflationary 80's. He also publishes a weekly investment newsletter that has 150,000 subscribers, called Financial Survival Report.

In addition Ruff distributes a weekly radio program to 115 radio stations nationwide. He and his wife live in Mapleton, Utah.

Ruff became active in political lobbying because he saw it as part of what he calls his self-appointed mission.

"I see myself doing three things to research and know, to the best of my abilities, the economic trends and the best kinds of investments for inflation-hedge investors; to communicate what the best investments are to my subscribers; and to block legislation that is designed to hurt the inflation-hedge investor."

Ruff said the way to be heard by politicians is to have influence over a number of people. Let's say it, he said, "if you can't give them a lot of money, give them the time of day unless they know it will win them votes," he said.

His political action group endorsed 150 candidates this election year. When deciding whether to support a candidate, Ruff said, he sends the candidate an extensive questionnaire to find out things like: would the candidate be inclined to support bringing back the gold standard? or, would he support, in Ruff's words, "totalitarian issues like wage and price freezes?"

"First of all, we recognize that no one is perfect," he said. "But we want to be sure the candidate we support is on the right side of free market issues."

Ruff worries about bills like the recent Monetary Control Act of 1981. The act made it legal to back U.S. currency with the debts owed this country by 12 other countries including France, Great Britain, and Canada.

Before the act was passed, the dollar could be backed only with government bonds or gold.

Ruff also said he sees loans made by U.S. banks to communist countries — like the Soviet Union, Poland, Hungary and Romania — as a threat.

"We have so much money loaned to communist block countries that we have a vested interest in making their governments work," he said.

"We have loaned over $80 million to these countries. Some of this has gone to finance the build-up of armies. Some of it has had to keep up — increasing our national debt."

"If these countries collapse, our country would have to step in and save them in order to save the banks that loaned them the money," he said.

One solution to the economic ills that the United States faces, and one that Ruff strongly advocates, is returning to the gold standard. That is, backing all currency with gold.

According to Ruff, the reason it hasn't been done already is that it would be political suicide.

"Constituents gets fed enough," he said. "We, too, will go to it — but not until things get a lot worse."

When asked what "worse" would be, he said simply, "Inflation in the triple digits would bring it about."

Although he contends that the future holds some hard times financially, in the short term, Ruff expects an upturn in the economy.

Some of the economic indicators that make Ruff look for an upturn are an increase in prices of lumber, plywood, gold, silver, copper and platinum.

Platinum is an especially good indicator because of its industrial uses, particularly its use in the manufacture of catalytic converters in automobiles, he said.

"The people in the automobile industry watch the economy very closely, and when they sense an upturn in the economy they start buying platinum. Right now the cost of platinum is at $358 an ounce, compared with gold, which is at $432," he said.

"When the price of platinum tops the price of gold, that is the final indicator that the economy is valid again," he said.

Historically, interest rates come down near the bottom of a depression, with short-term loans coming down first, and mortgage rates coming down last, he said.

"I predicted three months ago that the prime would go below 12 percent, and one of the New York banks just lowered its to 11.5 percent."

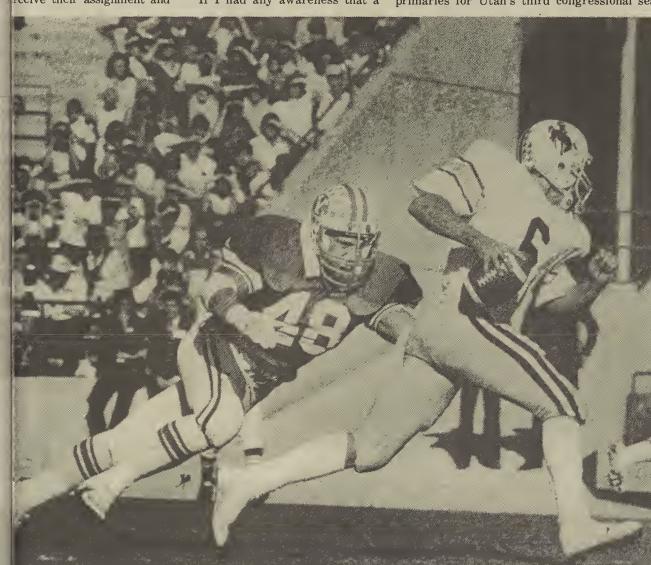

Ruff also thinks interest rates will continue to fall. "I think that the stock market is in a medium-term decline," he said.

"Interest rates are falling because the economy is weak."

"Consumers and businesses have pulled in their horns and stopped borrowing money," he said.

"We have to wait and see if the economy is valid again," he said.

Utahns donate son's liver

MINNEAPOLIS — Jamie Fiske, an 11-month-old girl who received a life-saving liver transplant, continues to "show signs of improvement," doctors reported Sunday.

"Doctors continue to monitor her closely and have indicated they are pleased with her progress," said University of Minnesota Hospitals.

She was on a respirator but may be taken off support systems by Monday. Jamie was listed in satisfactory condition in the pediatric intensive care unit.

The youngster is the daughter of Charles and Marilyn Fiske of Bridgewater, Mass. Born last Nov. 26, she was somewhat jaundiced at birth and the disease was traced to biliary atresia, in which bile backs up into the liver.

Physicians said that without a liver transplant, she could die by her first birthday.

Fiske received national attention when he made a desperate plea for help to a group of pediatricians. Lared and Leanne Bellon of Utah heard of Jamie's plight and offered the organ from their 10-month-old son, Jess, after he was fatally injured in a car-train accident.

The transplant took place Friday.

3 Soviets hijack Russian plane

ANKARA, Turkey — Three Soviets seeking political asylum hijacked a Soviet airliner Sunday, stabbed the pilot and forced the plane to land at a Turkish Nato base where they surrendered, officials said.

The AN-24 with 25 people aboard had been on a domestic flight from Novorossiysk to Odessa on the Soviet Black Sea coast when the three men commanded it, said an official in the Ankara office of Aeroflot, the state-run Soviet airline.

Coast Guard seizes marijuana

BOSTON — Coast Guard crews seized a 240-foot freighter and an estimated 30 tons of marijuana after firing across its bow when it refused orders to stop, a spokesman said Sunday.

The ship was being escorted to Boston on Sunday and was expected to arrive Tuesday, said Norman Whitehurst, spokesman for the Coast Guard office here.

Prison population growing

WASHINGTON — The number of federal and state prisoners increased by 6.9 percent in the first half of this year, the Justice Department said Sunday.

The Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said that if the rate of increase continues for the rest of 1982, it would mark the largest annual percentage growth in prison population in at least 56 years.

There were 394,380 inmates as of June 30, the bureau said. The growth rate would be equal to 14.3 percent for the full year, which would be 2 percentage points higher than any annual increase since the government began keeping statistics in 1926.

The increase in prison population exceeded 10 percent only four times since 1926: 11.6 percent in 1927, 12.2 percent in 1939, 10.1 percent in 1975 and 11.8 percent in 1981.

3-year tax ax 'not in jeopardy'

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said Sunday he does not believe the Reagan administration's three-year personal income tax reduction is jeopardized by the newly elected Congress.

The longtime advocate of supply-side economics predicted on CBS' "Face the Nation" that most new members of Congress will oppose a rollback of the 10 percent tax cut scheduled for 1983 when they get a good look at the nation's "annual budget."

In last week's election, the Democrats increased their majority by 26 seats.

Kemp said he believed Americans voted to "get this country moving again." The economy will not be stimulated by canceling the third-year tax cut, he said.

He predicted President Reagan would veto any "tinkering," and cited the example of eliminating the tax break for those with annual incomes over $50,000.

2,200 show for tickets yawning and anxious

Priority one basketball tickets were distributed Friday morning to 288 students gathered in the Marriott Center before 5 a.m. he added.

Reeve said 2,525 pairs of priority two tickets are available.

Successful

The early-morning random distribution program, performed by ASU-TV's Attilio Viscardi, was successful, although almost 1,900 students who arrived at the Marriott Center two hours before dawn did not receive tickets.

Surprised

"I was very much surprised that 2,200 people showed up that early in the morning," Reeve said. "This should show BYU administration that there are great demand for tickets."

Before 5 a.m.

Students who entered the Marriott Center before 5 a.m. received a number, Reeve said. A random drawing was to select the ticket recipients.

Random method

"We felt it necessary to use a system where tickets were given to students who really wanted them," Reeve said.

"At the same time, however, we wanted to give as many students as possible the opportunity to get tickets — that's why we used a random method."

Priority one tickets for winter semester will probably be distributed in a similar fashion, he said, but with a few changes.

"I think it's possible we won't do it so early in the morning," Reeve

LDS leaders say give

Elder Hanks said: "I've felt sad many times when I've come up short, but I've never regretted being a little too kind or doing more than my share."

Share everything

Elder Hanks also told students to share everything they have with their neighbors and with the Lord.

"Perhaps the only thing you have to share is a smile," he said, "but you ought to share even that. You mustn't miss the blessings that come to those who share with others and with the Lord what they have earned."

Elder Dunn emphasized the importance of fast offerings, reminding the students that fast offerings help "real people that are really in need."

"Paying fast offerings is more than just putting money in an envelope," Elder Dunn said. "The money goes to people who need it. That is the great principle of fast offerings. It is a principle that cannot be found in any other program in the world."

Ten times

Elder Dunn said students must not be stingy with their fast offerings and should pay ten times what they would eat in a normal day if they are in a position to do so.

"If we are affluent, we should be very generous," he said. "Let's not count the exact cost of one or two eggs. We receive great blessings for our rendering of fast offerings."

"Whenever anyone fails to do their duty in life," Elder Dunn said, "there is always a sad consequence that someone else suffers because of it. If we don't pay fast offerings, someone else is going to suffer."

ner, of the LDS Church's First Presidency, Elder Scott told students about five keys of success in temporal economic problems.

Honest thinking

"We must pay an honest tithe, live on what we earn, use a budget, share with our companion all financial matters, and be honest in all our dealings," Elder Scott said.

"Obedience to gospel principles will bring us freedom," he said. "It will bring us freedom from debt and freedom from sin."

Elder Simpson said the Lord blesses his children when they sacrifice for His sake.

"The words of one of our church's favorite songs say that sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven," Elder Simpson said. "I bear witness that God is concerned about our happiness and existence and will bless us if we tithe and make other sacrifices."

Russian diplomat

Elder Simpson told students that he recently returned to his home in the Soviet Union, his home who could not understand why Latter-day Saints were willing to do and sacrifice so much.

"That man was an atheist, and he left my home an atheist," Elder Simpson said. "We sacrifice because we believe in God and follow Him. My guest didn't understand that simple principle."

Elder Cook said members of the church should get out of debt and follow the teachings of church leaders when considering financial problems.

Salmon abandon migration

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Threatened by overfishing, the majestic male Atlantic salmon is abandoning its eons-old migration to the sea so it can survive as a pint-sized fresh water fish.

Although that will help the species escape extinction, scientists say the future of the future will be far different from the succulent catch that is one of the most sought-after prizes of commercial and sport fishermen.

Dr. Robert Naiman of the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution says that the salmon no longer go to the sea, fattening up and then return to their home rivers weighing 20 pounds or more. Instead, the males are living out their lives in the fresh water rivers and reproducing when they are no bigger than a man's finger.

Preserves species

"This will act to preserve the species," says Naiman. "With all the pressure going on, the fish is plastic enough to be able to change its behavior and shift its gene Naiman is director of the institution's scientific station on the Matamak River in Quebec. This small, unspoiled river is near Sept-Îles on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Normal life-cycle

In normal times, the salmon are born and live in the rivers of New England and the Atlantic Canada for three years or so, when they swim out to sea. There they may travel hundreds or thousands of miles, eating and growing fat for as long as three years. If all goes well, they return later to spawn in the rivers of their birth.

Salmon return

"As with this shift to smaller and smaller fish, they are going to lose their appeal, and they'll persist."

— the fish that have been at sea for one year are being caught and for those that stay out two years and make longer migrations, the situation is worse. More than 80 percent are caught.

A decade ago, between 250 and 500 salmon returned.

Howard Ruff visited BYU earlier this semester and talked to students about financial matters. Ruff recommends investing in long-term calls — two to four years in most cases. But when asked what investments he would recommend for college students, Ruff advised getting a good education in a field where jobs keep up with inflation, such as engineering or law.

Ruff: student spending

"That's why they have increased the money supply — not the money supply you hear about — but the amount of money available to lend. What we are seeing in the stock market is panic buying while the interest rates are down."

For those who wish to invest, some of the best investments now, according to Ruff, are:

1. Gold-mining shares. One gold-mining stock recently went from $30 a share to $55 a share in three months.

2. Silver. "When we recommended buying silver in our newsletter, the price was $4.80 an ounce; now it's $10.55."

3. Gold bullion and gold coins like krugerrands.

4. Bonds.

"Most of the investments that I recommend are long-term calls — two to four years in most cases," Ruff said. "Occasionally I come across an investment that's too good to resist, however."

When asked what investments he would recommend for college students, Ruff did not give the same advice. "The first investment you should make while you are in college is in yourself — get a good education in a field where you can get a job that will keep up with inflation, like engineering or law," he said.

Next on the list of investments for college students is food storage program. Ruff suggested that the storage program should include not only food, but also commodities that can be used during the next year.

The commodities, bought at a discount and in quantity, should include things like toilet paper, light bulbs and spark plugs.

Ruff explained that by doing this, the person can pay last year's discount price for the things that he uses today. Also, the investment can be made by the government.

Ruff also said he thinks some small businesses would be a good investment in the coming years.

"I think it's a properly run 'fix anything' repair business would do extremely well in the next few years," he said.

Other businesses he recommended were: a computer software business, because it could be started with little capital; or a publishing business.

Ruff says he is often called a doomsdayer, but that the title is not deserved. "The world is always full of opportunities, you just have to find them," he said. "In that regard I'm an eternal optimist."

were approving under all conditions.

Many of these nurses who supported abortion said the potential quality of life awaiting the child is of primary importance.

"I don't believe any woman wants an abortion," wrote one nurse, "but there are situations in which a child would be born into a life of hell, or the mother's life so affected by a child that she would abuse or kill an innocent being. Perhaps I have seen too many abused children."

Another respondent, who said she had two abortions herself, opposed the practice to the extent that she felt uncomfortable when she participated in abortion proceedings at her hospital.

"Although my abstaining from abortions is officially tolerated by my department, I am constantly reminded that my position on abortion is a burden and nuisance to the rest of the department . . ."

"At this point the cases are too few to tell us which direction the interpretation will go," said Wood. "We don't know yet how strictly these laws will be enforced."

"Nurses' attitudes toward abortion, the researchers said, varied considerably with differing sets of circumstances. While 63 percent of the nurses supported abortion for any reason during the first trimester of pregnancy, only the circumstance of threat to the mother's life drew approval of a majority of nurses for an abortion during the third trimester."

Only 5 percent of the nurses were opposed to abortion regardless of the situation, and 11 percent

Two test rabbits alive, Army says

HONOLULU (AP) — The Army denied a recent public report that said two rabbits used to detect buried land mines had died recently on Johnston Island, 825 miles southwest of Honolulu.

"No rabbits have died from exposure to chemical agents in the past year, and there is no crisis or emergency at Johnston Island," said Will Krantz, a civilian spokesman for U.S. Army Western Command.

In recent editions of the Honolulu Advertiser, military reporter Jim Borg wrote, "Only two rabbits on Johnston Island have died from gas in the past year, the Army says."

Krantz said bombs containing mustard gas and "nerve agents GB and GB" are stored on Johnston. He refused to say how many or what types of bombs are stockpiled on the 625-acre island.

Krantz said Borg's story, which claimed leaks are occurring among bombs armed with nerve agents GB, and "detected" events that occurred in part of the Army's regular inspection on the island over a five-year period.

"The island is not currently experiencing any unusual or abnormal problems," he said.

BOOK REVIEW

Theodore H. White, "In Search of History, a Personal Adventure," Warner Books, 720 pp., $3.95. Available at BYU bookstore.

White's best selling autobiography is coming out in a new book, having come out in 1978. But it is fascinating reading. It is an adventure story that provides a window into important historical events and history — makers of the World War II period and following two decades.

This is a Horatio Alger story — of a once poor Jewish newsboy from Boston whose love of Chinese history, language and determination to understand the world, eventually led him into an illustrious career as Time magazine editor and political historian.

White's writing yields many fresh insights (including vicarious observations of some of the important makers of the time). Here are a few examples:

Chiang Kai-shek — "As late as the spring of 1945, he was still astonished at excesses in the system he commanded, and ordained the summary execution of the chief of the national drama school because it was so corrupt. He was probably the sort of a long chain of tyrants who believed a problem could be solved by shrieking 'Off with his head!'

"I can see Chiang now as a pathetic man. He loved his two sons, his wife and his country — his country most. But he did not know how to be a good ruler or a good father: the pathos came in his trying to do good and fall that will keep up with inflation, like engineering or law," he said.

Next on the list of investments for college students is food storage program. Ruff suggested that the storage program should include not only food, but also commodities that can be used during the next year.

The commodities, bought at a discount and in quantity, should include things like toilet paper, light bulbs and spark plugs.

Ruff explained that by doing this, the person can pay last year's discount price for the things that he uses today. Also, the investment can be made by the government.

Ruff also said he thinks some small businesses would be a good investment in the coming years.

"I think it's a properly run 'fix anything' repair business would do extremely well in the next few years," he said.

Other businesses he recommended were: a computer software business, because it could be started with little capital; or a publishing business.

Ruff says he is often called a doomsdayer, but that the title is not deserved. "The world is always full of opportunities, you just have to find them," he said. "In that regard I'm an eternal optimist."

Many of these nurses who supported abortion said the potential quality of life awaiting the child is of primary importance.

"I don't believe any woman wants an abortion," wrote one nurse, "but there are situations in which a child would be born into a life of hell, or the mother's life so affected by a child that she would abuse or kill an innocent being. Perhaps I have seen too many abused children."

Another respondent, who said she had two abortions herself, opposed the practice to the extent that she felt uncomfortable when she participated in abortion proceedings at her hospital.
